

Freedom

A Photographic History of the African American Struggle

Text by Manning Marable and Leith Mullings, picture-editing by Sophie Spencer-Wood

290 x 250 mm
11 3/8 x 9 7/8 inches
512 pp
100 col, 500 b&w
photographs

Paperback

978 0 7148 4517 3

£ 29.95 UK

$ 49.95 US

€ 39.95 EUR

$ 59.95 CAN

$ 75.00 AUS

Summer 2010

9 780714 845173

AVAILABLE
AGAIN

- A monumental visual record of over 500 carefully selected photos that document African American history from the early nineteenth century to the present day
- Explores the subject with incredible comprehensiveness, and includes some of Africa's most iconic images as well as never before published photographs
- A thought-provoking text and work of scholarship provided by two authorities on African American history

Manning Marable is the Founding Director of the Institute for Research in African American Studies at Columbia University in New York City and the author of more than 15 books on the subject, including the highly acclaimed Black Leadership (1998). Leith Mullings is Presidential Professor of Anthropology at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York and the author of several books on race, class, and gender in African American communities. Sophie Spencer-Wood is a picture editor and researcher. She has worked with, among others, Colin Jacobson on Reportage magazine and as assistant to Bruce Bernard on Phaidon's award-winning book, Century. Her other books include Gandhi and Family, also published by Phaidon.

